

Snowmobiling
“The Future is in Your Hands”

Will public and private lands remain open for our sport in the future? Long term use of the lands is no longer certain. Only the unified voice of the entire snowmobile community will help to guarantee the continuation of our sport.

Let ACSA be that voice.

ACSA, the American Council of Snowmobile Associations, is a national organization that was formed to unite the snowmobile community and

- To provide the communication link between the consumers, snowmobile manufacturers, suppliers, and snowmobile tourism industry;
- To provide educational materials for the promotion of safe and responsible snowmobiling;
- To provide information to increase public awareness, understanding and appreciation of the sport of snowmobiling;
- To work with and educate federal government entities and diversified coalitions to monitor legislative and regulatory initiative that will encourage equitable treatment of snowmobiling, funding and maintenance of snowmobile trails;
- To provide member services and benefits;
- To work with our members to keep our sport a successful recreation.

Snowmobiling is enjoyed by millions and must be represented by a strong national organization. ACSA is that organization.

This national organization is dependent on the continued involvement of volunteers who enjoy snowmobiling as a form of outdoor recreation.

The continued involvement of volunteers is dependent on financial resources to sustain that commitment.

ACSA is the national organization that is committed to the future preservation of our sport. This organization is dependent on resources through partnerships within the entire snowmobile industry.

Your contribution entitles you to:

- The ACSA E-Newsletter, to keep you up to date on snowmobiling issues across the 25 snow belt states;
- Listing in the ACSA annual directory for Business Contributors & Partners;
- Reports from governmental agencies;
- Representation on national outdoor recreational coalitions.

ACSA appreciates your support and contributions on a national level and encourages your continued support of your local and state clubs and associations. Information on state associations can be obtained through the ACSA office.

Assure the future of snowmobiling, join ACSA Today.
